NUMBER 29

GOOD ADVICE TO FARMERS

Not many farmers who have been raising tobacco for the market in years past have held their crops for summer delivery. Therefore, a few words to those still holding their tobacco in barns at home will not come amiss.

In the first place the tobacco should be hung very close, in fact pressed moderately together, as this will prevent much loss in weight which happens when often coming in and going out of case. In this close-hung condition it should be left until it gets the advantage of as much hot weather as possible, thereby insuring the tobacco a thorough drying. Consult Mr. Ware before taking your tobacco down, (if it should come into the warehouse in too high case so that there is likely to be damaged tobacco after pricing, it will have to be at the owner's risk and expense. This extra expense means that the tobacco will have to be rehung in the warehouse here and the warehouse company can not advance money on it until it is in condition to insure keeping. One of the best tests is that after two or three dry, still days the tobacco is found early in the day, say before 8 o'clock, to be in good case, there will be little risk in bulking it to keep.

Follow these directions and let every man who knows how to handle in summer order render what assistance and advice he can to his neighbor. With our drying plant next season we will not have this trouble.

I will be glad to answer any questions growers may wish to ask me in reference to this matter. Respectfully,
F. A. WARE, (Grader.)

...LOCAL ROUND-UP...

First Meeting In 45 Years.

Mr. J. W. Oliver, of Logan county, Arkansas, is visiting his brother, Mr. J. N. H. Oliver, of Mooreville. Mr. Oliver has been living in Arkansas about thirty-five years, but was born and reared in Lyon county, near Edenville, this State. This is the first time the two brothers have met in forty-five years, and naturally the meeting was a happy one. Mr. J. N. H. Oliver enlisted in the Union army in '62, and at the close of the war settled in another section of the State other than his home, consequently the separation of the brothers resulted. Mr. Oliver called on The Sun Monday and during the course of a conversation said that the people of Arkansas were prosperous, that cotton raisers are receiving almost double the usual price for cotton. The increase in price Mr. Oliver states is due to the organization of the farmers. They organized and made a demand for higher prices. Mr. Oliver is a staunch Democrat, but he does not especially admire Gov. Jeff Davis, but he says Jeff always manages to "get there and stay there." He will be in the county several days.

Rev. C. L. Collins Here Sunday.

Rev. C. L. Collins, Superintendent of the Kentucky Anti-Saloon League, preached at the Baptist church last Sunday morning. He reviewed the work done by the League in Kentucky, and explained its plans for the future. Mr. Collins, occupied the pulpit at the Presbyterian church Sunday night, but an electrical and rain storm prevented a large crowd attending. Mr. Collins' friends in Springfield were glad to see him, and hope that he will soon visit the town again.

Lynne Bush Successful.

Mr. Lynne Bush, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bush, of this place, has passed the examination and will enter the Naval Academy at Annapolis. Mr. Bush has been attending a preparatory school at Annapolis for only a few weeks, and when it is considered that few applicants pass until they have had at least a year's training in a preparatory school, it is a pretty testimonial to his scholarship. A letter recently received from Prof. R. L. Wernitz, of the U. S. Naval Academy Preparatory School, Compliments Lynne in the following language:

"He is a steady-going, well-balanced, well-behaved, industrious, and ambitious boy. He has kept his eyes and ears open and his hands at work and I have high hopes that he will succeed."

"If you have any more out there like him, at any time, do not fail to see that they join us. We want that character of boy. All we have to do is to teach him; we do not have to discipline him. Many boys require more attention than that which is necessary to increase their fund of knowledge. Your boy does not. He is the class of pupil we like."

Lynne's friends in Springfield congratulate him, and predict that his career in the Naval Academy at Annapolis will be brilliant and creditable. He will be at home this week to remain a while with his parents before entering school.

Old Watermelon Time.

Mr. H. C. Ferrill, of near Williamsburg, was in The Sun office Monday, and informs us that the prospect for a large crop of watermelons is unusually good. Gratifying, indeed! we are afforded food for sweet contemplation. Mr. Ferrill says he has five acres of melons, and that they are now very promising. He requests The Sun to say that he intends to guard this patch when the melons become ripe, and that "watermelon thieves" will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law.

Cutting Scrape.

At a late hour Monday night Amos Hood, who resides in the northern section of the county, was quite severely cut by an unknown party. Mr. Hood had been here to attend county court, and was on his way home when he became involved in a quarrel with an unknown man, who proceeded to use a knife. Hood, after being cut, came to town and managed to arouse Lieut. Wm. O. Reed, who is stopping at the Walton Hotel, telling the Lieutenant that he (Hood) was dead. Lieutenant didn't believe it and called Dr. Roberts, who found it necessary to take several stitches in Hood's back in order the close the wounds. He is not thought to be dangerously hurt.

Mr. McChord In Anderson.

Hon. W. C. McChord was in Lawrenceburg last Saturday, where he delivered a speech upon the tobacco situation. The farmers of Anderson county will build a warehouse, arrangements having been made last Saturday after Mr. McChord's speech to take the matter up, and the plans will be vigorously pushed.

Death of Frank Clements.

Mr. Frank Clements, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Clements, of Chicago, Ill., died at the Springfield Hotel here this morning at 5:40 of a complication of diseases. He was between fifteen and sixteen years old, and was an intelligent young man. He came here two weeks ago from Chicago, and went to Tatham Springs, hoping that the water there would give him relief. His grandfather, Mr. Frank Clements, Sr., resides at Fredericktown, and is one of the best known men in that section of the county. The Sun, together with many friends, extends sincere condolence to the bereaved.

The Warehouse.

The tobacco people will be glad to hear that the new warehouse is nearing completion and it is expected to receive tobacco on July 8, the books being open for registration of crops on Friday, July 5.

Farmers should be especially careful about handling their tobacco now as there is so much danger of getting too much rain case and thereby damaging their tobacco. All tobacco coming into the warehouse, except in first-class condition for putting in hogheads, will have to be rehung, thereby entailing extra expense and delay to the farmer. So be careful and do not run this risk by failure to attend to the condition of the tobacco properly.

Four Cases of Typhoid.

In the family of Mr. James I. Royalty there are four cases of typhoid fever, though none of the cases are at this time considered serious. Royalty and three children are afflicted. The children are: Walter, Hadgie and Granville. They have been ill for several days, but it is thought that Walter has begun to improve. The family was first stricken with measles, and hardly recovered from this disease before typhoid fever developed.

The Springfield Moon.

Springfield now has three papers. Master Ivor Roberts has "launched" the "Springfield Moon." The paper is Democratic and is all "home print." It is not large—being just a new moon—but we predict that some "day" the "Moon" will shine as only a full moon can. The price of the paper is one cent a copy. Its editor is one of the brightest boys in the State, and will some day be a great editor. "The Moon," in full, is as follows:

[Fire! Fire! Fire! There has been three fires in Springfield in the last six weeks. The last one was the old Berry Hotel.

Mr. Mac Grundy was in Valley Hill Monday.

Birds are fitting in the treetops.

Mating, nesting, singing, chirping in all notes of rhythmic cadence.

Pouring music from their soft throats, Waking echoes of glad springtime.

Merry thrushes, saucy blue-jays, Robin-red-breasts flocking northward.

Seem to carry sunshine with them. Playful cat-birds, blue-winged mockers.

From the sturdy oaks, from the trees, Merry concerts, reproducing.

All the bird-songs of the forests.

Gentle rhapsodies softly cooing.

Tell us that the Winter's over.

Spring has come with love and music.

Modest whippoorwills with twilight.

Breaks the stillness with her plaintive Love-note, calling her companion.

To an evening entertainment.

"Neath the fresh leaves in the moonlight.

O, 'tis joyous to be living.

Standing thus so close to Nature,

Genial sunshine and soft showers.

Call the sleeping germs of flowers.

To come forth in life and beauty.

From the cold graves in the bosom Of the dead earth.

Lo, they come all wreath'd in bright smiling.

Come to clothe the earth in beauty.

Death and Winter clutched in fresh life.

Give us our lives again, O Nature!

Of a glorious Resurrection.

Strolling through the stately forests,

Treading Nature's mossy carpets.

Neath the splendors of the blue dome.

And the twinkling stars that deck it.

Touching, tasting, hearing, seeing.

Emblems of eternal life in green earth.

And all the things upon it.

All the colors of the rainbow.

All the graces of the curves and angles.

All the poetry of motion.

And the music of the universe.

Meet us, greet us, bid us lift our Hearts and voices in one song of

Adoration and thanksgiving.

To the God who made and keeps us.

Yonder gray cliffs border the river,

Rising up in towering grandeur.

As if placed to protect the heavens—

Emblems of eternal life in green earth.

While between them flows the river,

Onward gliding to the ocean.

Warning us our lives are gliding.

Ever gliding through life's changes.

To the fixed and the eternal.

Milk For Poultry.

Many poultrymen believe that there is no feed that is so good for young chicks or old fowls as sour milk, clabbered milk, or cheese curd made from sour milk. Even old sour milk, for fowls, is excellent food, but all of this must have something added to it. No gapes or cholera prevail among chickens that are fed upon sour milk and fed from clean troughs. A good food is fresh ground cornmeal from a good corn, shorts and oatmeal, wet with clabbered milk, and some cracked corn and whole wheat, fed according to the age of the chickens. Rearing chickens requires judgment—there is a time and a place for every step from the egg to the full grown chicken. Experience, with the right kind of perseverance, will rear chickens and also take care of old and young fowls. Sour milk, thickened with shorts and meal, fed every morning, and some kind of gran at night, is a satisfactory egg food. It is the impression of many that the cornmeal, the oatmeal and shorts, with the cracked corn and whole wheat, constitute a very good variety of food, even with the sour milk left out. New milk is best for very young chicks, if it can be had, but the sour milk is excellent for adults.

A former Owensboro girl, who recently married a Japanese, says that she prefers a Jap to an American "because Japs are the soul of honor." Especially does she prefer the Jap to a Kentuckian, "because Kentuckians are liars." THE BEST.

The Springfield Electric Light and Water Company has recently installed a new dynamo in its power house, and, while in the past the company has been giving both city and individuals good light service, it is now prepared to furnish the VERY BEST.

There is not a town in Kentucky that has a better equipped plant of this nature, and every citizen of Springfield should be proud of it. Of course an occasional knocker bobs up, but the "source of the kick" usually comes from some fellow whose opinion, publicly or privately expressed, amounts to naught. Within the past two years three times the water company has prevented Springfield from being wiped up by fire—twice within two months. Certainly every business man—every citizen who loves his town—is grateful to the fire and water companies for the most excellent services they rendered. The power house is in charge of competent men; the fire company is composed of well trained and fearless fire-fighters, a thing that few towns the size of Springfield can boast of. It is a source of much gratification to business men and property owners to know that Springfield is thus protected.

Mr. Howard McElroy is Superintendent of the Water and Light Company. He is thorough and efficient, and it is his endeavor to make his company rank with the best in the State. Mr. W. B. Holderman has charge of the plant and machinery from 12 o'clock noon until 12 at night. He is competent in every respect, and never sleeps at his post of duty. Cy Moore, colored, has charge of the plant from 12 at night until 12 noon, and he, too, is competent. He "sees his duty a dead sure thing," and does it well.

Thus, with a good plant and competent men in charge, Springfield has ample fire protection, excellent lights and good, pure water.

KISSING BABIES.

The American Medical Association has gone on record against the baby-kissing fad. Good! we are glad the doctors have declared against this very unnecessary evil. The infant needs protection along this line; it is helpless and cannot resent the "insult." We boil bottles and sterilize milk to prevent germs entering into baby's system, and along comes the baby-kisser with a mouthful of odor and microbes and assaults the little one. If you want to "love the baby" hold its face to the east, turn your face to the west and squeeze it. Squeezing is more delightful than kissing, anyhow.

We are going to have another Fourth of July next week, and the young American will proceed to touch off giant fire crackers and kill himself.

Killed By Cars.

Lebanon Enterprise: H. R. Hays, foreman of the bridge crew on the Knoxville branch of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad was instantly killed at Phillipsburg Monday afternoon about four o'clock, while attempting to alight from a rapidly moving flat car. The accident occurred shortly before the afternoon train was due at Phillipsburg on its return to this city, and the body of the unfortunate man was brought to his home here on it, arriving shortly after six o'clock. The following afternoon the remains were taken to his old home in Louisville where the funeral and burial took place Wednesday.

Annabel Lee.

It was many and many a year ago,
In a kingdom by the sea,
That a maiden lived, whom you may know
By the name of Annabel Lee;
And this maiden she lived with no other thought
Than to love and be loved by me.

I was a child and she was a child,
In this kingdom by the sea,
But we loved with a love that was more than love,
And this was the winged seraph of heaven
Coveted her and me.

And this was the reason that long ago,
In this kingdom by the sea,
A wind blew out of a cloud, chilling
My beautiful Annabel Lee;
So that her highborn kinsman came,
And bore her away from me,
To shut her up in a sepulchre,
In this kingdom by the sea.

The angels, not half so happy in heaven,
Were envying her and me;
Yes, that was the reason (as all men know)
In this kingdom by the sea,
That the wind came out of the cloud
By night,
Chilling and killing my Annabel Lee.

But our love it was stronger by far
Than the love
Of those who were older than we,
Of many far wiser than we,
And neither the angels in heaven
Above,
Nor the demons down under the sea,
Can ever dissever my soul from the soul
Of the beautiful Annabel Lee.

For the moon never beams, without
Bringing me dreams
Of the beautiful Annabel Lee;
And the stars never rise, but I feel the Blue eyes
Of the beautiful Annabel Lee;
And so, all the night-tide, I lie down by
The side
Of my darling—my darling—my life
And my bride,
In her sepulchre there by the sea,
In her tomb by the sounding sea.

Typhoid Serum Is Discovered.

Berlin, June 24.—New and valuable results of investigation against typhoid have been obtained by Dr. Peter Bergell, the chief assistant of Prof. Von Leyden, in the officially subsidized cancer research, which is now proceeding in Germany. According to the published reports some desperate cases have been cured with the new process.

By drying the cultures of virulent typhoid germs and freeing them of every vestige of albuminous matter, by means of muriatic acid, and injecting the resultant solution, in which there are no dead bacilli, into horses, Dr. Bergell has obtained a serum which immunizes against typhoid fever and prevents intestinal perforation if injected during the attack.

In an article describing the success of his experiments Dr. Bergell asserts that the discovery has already been taken up by the German Ministry of War, which believes that it promises to be an immense aid in fighting the ravages of typhoid in the army.

LONG RUN.

Mrs. Julia Arnold (nee Skimer), of East Boyle, died on the morning of the 21st of June, from heart dropsy, or rather a complication of diseases. The deceased was born August 6, 1833. She was married to Mr. John Arnold Dec. 3, 1907, to this union were born six children, two of whom preceded her to the grave. She was converted under the preaching of Rev. W. B. Arvin, of Beech Grove church by Rev. W. T. Wood, pastor. Her funeral was preached to a large congregation on the 22nd by Rev. R. L. Purdom, which was very appropriate and very encouraging to the bereaved ones and inspiring and helpful to all present, after which the remains were laid away to await the resurrection. Sister Arnold's husband died, leaving the care and responsibility of the family largely upon her, which she bore with a mother's fortitude and care. It can truly be said of her "She was a Christian woman." To the bereaved ones we extend our sympathy and with them shed a tear.

Mr. Jim Watters, of Mackville, preached a very interesting sermon at Wesley Chapel last Sunday from the text: "Resist the devil and he will flee from you." The preacher told us how Satan rebelled in heaven and he and his host were cast into hell, and of the temptation and fall of our first parents in Eden, and how he often comes in pleasing form and mild manner as an angel of light clad in silk, but was an enemy that hated God and every thing good.

On the night of the 18th Mr. Harrison Coyle gave his friends a moonlight party at his grandmother's, Mrs. E. Cocanougher. About sixty were present. The occasion was a very pleasant one, and all went home feeling the evening had been well spent.

Mr. Marcus Cocanougher and little son, Hubert, of Springfield, visited his parents here Sunday.

Mr. Jim Bottoms and family were guests at Mr. George Russell's Sunday.

We are sorry to say that Mr. Woodie Coyle has typhoid fever. He is doing nicely at present.

Mr. John Best lost a fine mare last week from eating too much white clover, which is so dangerous this year because there is so much of it, the writer never remembers to have seen so much; it nearly covers whole fields, and is said to be as fatal to stock as red clover.

Last week M. D. L. Cocanougher lost a valuable Jersey cow from milk fever. Mr. Dick May, of Perryville, the stock doctor, said within the last year he has had forty cases of this kind and thirty-eight of them were Jerseys, and also said watch the cow close after calving and if any symptoms of the disease appears make all the haste to get a doctor that is fully equipped to treat the disease.

The feature of the program, however, was the alumni address by the Hon. Ben Johnson, of Bardstown. Mr. Johnson gave some excellent advice to the students, and illustrated it with practical examples from life; he spoke very touchingly of the limitations of Father Fennedy and of Brother Angelo.

CHAPTER VIII.

A number of times during the following year, he visited the anniversary of the Santa tragedy, but carried the Exchange to the verge of panic, only to turn the market and save the Street in the end. His profits were fabulous. Already his fortune was estimated to between two and three hundred millions, one of the largest in the world. His name had become one of terror wherever he went, and he would not deign to come to regard his every deal, from the moment that he began operations, as inevitably successful. Now and again he would jump into the market and play a few days, but he would have a bear raid under way, and would put them to rout by buying every thing in sight and bidding up prices

When Woman Guides The Plot.

HENRY
LINSLEY
DOOLITTLE

Copyright, 1907, by P. C. Eastman.

The unusual is ever the most attractive. From his assortment of morning mail Boyer first of all selected the one unbusinesslike envelope and hastily tore it open. He read softly, with rising elation:

My Dear Jimmy—Monday evening next, April 1, I am planning a little heart surprise party in honor of little sister's birthday. It won't be complete without one of her best friends, so please cut everything and come. I should have let you know sooner had I not expected to see you at the club reception the night before yours-out with the other girl! Anyway, Monday evening without fail. Your sincere friend,

GRACE LOUISE ELSTON.

"It wouldn't do to miss Marion's birthday—in memory of three years ago, if for no other reason," he meditated.

"Too bad she had to kick up such a fuss over nothing. How was I to blame? She must have wanted up, or I never should have been invited. I wonder— But at that moment the pile of business letters caught his eye reprovingly.

Arriving early at the Elston home, he found the apartment ablaze with guests. Large ones adorned the curtains and electric lights, while smaller tokens of the occasion were strewn about in picturesque profusion. Above the main doorway hung a flying Cupid, prince of romance.

The early arrivals had formed into interested groups. More than once Boyer thought he heard the mention of some engagement, but upon drawing nearer he was met by a sudden change of subject and what seemed half-startled glances. At last he cornered his hostess.

"What does a heart party usually mean?" she parried, with a laugh that jarred strangely on his nerves. "Oh, there's Mr. Stanwood. I must see that he meets some of the out-of-towners, and she was gone."

Just then Marjorie entered, "Little sister," as he had once called her, looked very much gone on tonight. Boyer was among the first to press forward with congratulations. "How funny is it this time?" he quizzed in well feigned ignorance. "Let's see, three years ago it was nineteen. This time you throw double two—sign of good luck."

"She smiled in some embarrassment. "You have too good a memory, Jim. Can't you ever forget? After the teens a girl isn't so proud of her age."

He made way for the others with a tingling sensation of loss. After all, had it been so much her fault three years ago? At the other side of the room he caught sight of Miss Sherwood beckoning to him with parted lips. Mechanically he crossed to her side.

"I was never so stumped in my life," confided his companion. "You are an old friend of the family, Mr. Boyer. Did Miss Elston tell you before to-night?"

"I was about as much in the dark as any one," he evaded. "And did you see the ring?" she rattled on. "It's a perfect beauty!"

Jim smiled to hide his suspicion. Those best wishes—were they as innocently attached to her birthday as he had supposed? He tried to recall her new friends, but none seemed to fit the case.

"Well, if you can't tell me any more about the man than that, I guess I'll hunt up some one who can." Miss Sherwood disappeared with a parting shot, "I always supposed you were the right bower in that game."

Miss Elston was passing the tally cards. "The head table is up there," she indicated, "and the body at the other end. As there are two people short, the poorest couple at the last table will have to drop out each time until the next change. You'll find a consolation cozy corner in the conservatory."

Starting at the third table, Jim slowly advanced to the head and then he suddenly dropped to the other end. Marjorie was already there.

"Unlucky in cards," she laughed. "You might have given a fellow a little warning," he grieved—"sort of chance to renew his option." But the sound of the bell cut short the conversation.

For the next ten minutes he played atrociously, now heaping hearts upon her score, now adding needlessly to his own. The other pair exchanged knowing glances. He couldn't have made a plainer bid for the cozy corner. Yet Marjorie seemed oblivious.

"Now tell me all about it," began Jim a few minutes later.

Marjorie hesitated. "There isn't so much to tell," she began slowly at last. "Clifton is a distant cousin of mine. He cares for me, and I care for him. He's well off—and generous—and good looking." She voiced each winning quality with a deliberation that good. "And, above all, he knows his own mind. Why shouldn't I love him?" she demanded, turning suddenly to her companion.

"Oh, don't mind me tonight," he deprecated. "It's just this: I can't seem to realize what it all means to me. We did have such good times once, Marjorie."

She started at the sound of her nickname, so dearly loved of old. "We were children then," he reflected.

"And you promised to give me first chance if any one else came along," he pursued, drawing closer. "Did I, really? How foolish of me," she laughed. "Yet we were children, through it all. We even scraped like children at the finish."

Her laughing gray eyes glanced up to his.

"No, all your fault," she corrected. "Marjorie, do you really love him?" demanded Jim.

She started violently.

"Why, the idea—what a question! Here I came out for a friendly little talk with you, and you're plying a regular inquisitor. Do you suppose I shall ever marry a man I don't love? Not much!"

His stem crop softly arose from her waist.

"Haven't you any regard for honor?" she ventured. "We mustn't mean, you mustn't forget!"

"Honor?" repeated Jim slowly. "No. What I care for honor? If I love you, Marjorie, can't you see that I've loved you all the time and that it was just my infernal jealousy and pride that kicked up the trouble? Yes, I suppose we were children then, for children never stop to appreciate their happy comradeship till too late. But couldn't we be children again, Marjorie—you and I—while all the rest are growing up? Do you remember, it was four years ago tonight that I met you—at the Prestons' box party?"

He drew her closer to him. Everything favored the coquette love. The fragrance of the hothouse plants blended with a heavy perfume. The Japanese lanterns glowed softly with warm color-harmony.

He gently turned her face from the shadow to the softly glowing light.

"Do you really love me, Marjorie?" he repeated.

With a gesture of impatience—or was it of fright?—she arose and threw open a window. As she stood gazing into the night a distant hardy gust struck up the much worn "Good Old Summer Time." He joined her.

"Do you remember the first time we heard it together down on the Jersey shore, Marjorie?"

"Do I? Oh, what was I saying? It isn't fair," she implored.

Jim turned suddenly from the freshening breeze to the heavy fragrance within. "Well, I guess it's goodbye, Marjorie." He held out his hand.

"Oh, why couldn't I?"—he laughed. He stretched her to him. "Marjorie, look at me!"

Slowly she raised her eyes, then as suddenly buried her face in his hands. "Oh, how could you?" she gasped, with a frightened cry.

Gently he stroked her hair. "I'll go away and wait if it will do you good," he began feverishly, "if you'll—ah, hang that engagement! Others have discovered their mistake and broken off before it was too late. Will it do any good if I wait? Tell me, Marjorie, I must know."

Interesting, yet shaking violently, she rested her head against his shoulder, but only for an instant. There was a sound of moving chairs and approaching voices.

"May I come around tomorrow night?" he urged as he turned to the room.

She nodded carelessly, for steps were close at hand.

"We were just looking for you, Marjorie," said her sister. "It's time to cut the birthday cake. What has kept you two has been so busy out here? You'll be talked almost."

"I was just outlining my future plans," answered Jim, following the girls to the card room.

"You're perfect dears, both of you," Marjorie was saying to Grace and Clifton an hour later. "Jimmy's such a daisy in the mangle. I knew he cared for me, but that he'd never come to the point unless some one else butted in. It was such a joke to see how everybody thought Clifton was engaged to little me when big sister was the whole time."

Grace sleepily consulted her watch. "It is getting very late," she commented. "Suppose you return my ring. From my first glimpse into the conservatory I should judge that yours will arrive in a day or two."

SUED BY TWO MEN.

Each Swears Brooklyn School-teacher Is His Wife.

ASKS ALIMONY FROM BOTH.

Woman, Undisturbed by Her Odd Fix, Continues to Draw $900 a Year From School Board While Demanding That Plaintiffs Jointly Pension Her.

Though she is calmly teaching the children in public school No. 23, at Conesley and Humboldt streets, Brooklyn, it was developed in the Kings county supreme court that Miss Ada M. Kollmeyer is defendant in two suits entered by two men who are trying to get legal freedom from her. One is seeking for an absolute divorce, while the other is suing to have his marriage to the teacher annulled on the ground that she had never been divorced from the other. Though she is registered as Miss Ada M. Kollmeyer in the record of the school board, it was stated in court that her real name is Mrs. Ada M. Kollmeyer-King-Hays.

The history of her unusual marriage relations came out before Justice Kelly in the special term of the Kings county supreme court when she appeared, through counsel, in a motion for temporary alimony and counsel fee in one of the suits.

SHE REPRESENTED THAT SHE HAD BEEN DIVORCED.

This suit in which the teacher appeared as a defendant was entered by John P. King, a traveling salesman, who alleges that he married her in 1905.

King in his complaint placed emphasis on the point that he was only twenty years old when he met Miss Kollmeyer at a summer resort, while she was several years his senior. But that appeared to be no bar to their happiness, till his wife began to show plainly that she had a strong mind of her own.

Exasperated by his wife's determination to have her way, King finally packed his trunk and left her. That was in 1906. He never heard from her again till one day in 1906 when he met a mutual friend in Manhattan.

"Do you know that Ada has a divorce from you?" asked the girl, "and that she has been married to another man?"

She was shocked by the question. Then the girl told him that this wife had obtained a divorce in New Jersey and had been married to a Dr. Hays, whom she had met in Yonkers. King went home that night thinking hard. He wondered how his wife could have obtained a divorce without his knowing anything about it.

A search through the records of the Jersey courts revealed the fact that Mrs. King had obtained a divorce in some manner unknown to him. The court records stated that the divorce was granted on the ground of desertion, but only for an instant. There was a sound of moving chairs and approaching voices.

"May I come around tomorrow night?" he urged as he turned to the room.

She nodded carelessly, for steps were close at hand.

"We were just looking for you, Marjorie," said her sister. "It's time to cut the birthday cake. What has kept you two has been so busy out here? You'll be talked almost."

Republican Platform.

The Republican Party in Kentucky, in convention assembled, adopts the following platform:

First—We approve the policies and commend the ability, integrity and courage of President Roosevelt and his Administration and, without expressing a preference for any candidate, favor the selection by the next National Convention for President of one in full accord with these policies and who energetically carries them out in the interests of all the people.

Second—We demand that all elections shall be honestly conducted and declare that the cause of good government and the future happiness and welfare of the people of Kentucky are inseparably bound up in the suppression of all abuses and crimes against an honest ballot, that have so unfortunately disgraced our State under Democratic rule, depriving the people of their rightful heritage—representative government.

The law for registration certificates imposed on the State by the Democratic party for immoral political purposes, whereby votes in Kentucky have become negotiable instruments passing by delivery, ought to be repealed.

Third—The judiciary of the State, in both the Circuit and Appellate Courts, should be chosen "on non-partisan grounds and the continuance in office of faithful judicial public servants should be determined by no other qualification than fitness."

Fourth—There should be complete publicity concerning the expenditure of money for political purposes and a law should be passed providing for accounting by candidates and campaign managers of all sums of money collected for political purposes.

Fifth—We demand the redistricting of Kentucky in Legislative, Senatorial, Congressional and Judicial Districts, which shall give equal representation and equal voting power to every citizen of every district in conformity with the plain requirements of the Constitution and not as at present, in flagrant violation thereof.

Sixth—There should be prompt and efficient enforcement of the criminal laws of every kind, and at all times, but especially at this time do we call for the rigid enforcement of the laws against those forms of crime, which, under the recent administration of justice, in many communities, have been practically unpunished. Election thieves, gamblers, poolroom operators and others who commit crimes in the interest of those controlling the local administration of some of our cities and counties, should be punished. The jury should be so selected as to prevent the packing of juries for the purpose of securing verdicts in accordance with the wishes of those in whose hands the selection of the jury is placed, or under whose control and direction they are selected.

Seventh—We demand that the books, vouchers and accounts of all municipalities, all public officers and public institutions supported by the State, counties or cities, and of all corporations in which a city of the State owns the majority interest, either directly or through subordinate corporations, trustees or commissioners shall be open to inspection and investigation at all times by any citizen or citizens, and that any auditor and the results published by an independent accountant, who shall not be eligible to re-examine such books, vouchers or accounts twice in succession.

Eighth—We demand a reform in the management of our public elementary and penal institutions, to the end that they shall be operated by bipartisan boards, upon proper business principles, and their inmates treated humanely.

Ninth—We favor the enactment and enforcement of a uniform local option law, with the county as the governing unit.

Tenth—We demand that the public schools of the State shall be taken and kept entirely out of politics, and that the interests and welfare of the children shall have first consideration in all public school matters.

We call for better schools and school houses, for longer school terms in the country and better pay for the teachers, and that elections for school trustees be had on different days than other elections.

Eleventh—We favor amendments to State laws permitting and encouraging joint nominations of the same candidate by the different parties.

Twelfth—We condemn the law, passed for immoral political purposes creating the Racing Commission in Kentucky and demand its repeal.

Thirteenth—We favor the enactment by the Democratic party of a large number of obnoxious tax laws and the creation of useless offices with the reward of partisan service, and we promise, if given power, to repeal all such laws and reduce the tax to the lowest possible rate consistent with an efficient administration of the State Government.

CONCLUSION.

For years past the legislation enacted by the Democratic party and dictated by certain of its leaders has not been for the benefit of the citizen, but of the officeholder. The chief aim of such legislation has been the continued holding of office and the creation of new offices to be traded in as rewards for party service.

The citizen is at last realizing, as never before, that the administration of public affairs is a business that comes close home to him; that such business must be honestly and efficiently conducted and that his belief should not be cast as a matter of sentiment, but for that candidate or that party which shows the highest capacity for properly conducting the affairs of the State on strict business principles.

We ask the support of all patriotic citizens, regardless of their party affiliations, for the State ticket selected by this convention, and for the policies and principles above stated, believing that it will insure better days for Kentucky.

For State Librarian.

Mrs. W. Leslie Collins, the well known poet, author and composer, will be a candidate for State Librarian before the coming general Assembly of Kentucky.

She was the contending candidate for the last nomination.

Mrs. Collins (formerly Miss Emma Gowdy), is a native of Campbellsville, Taylor county, and is the widow of a turman and live-stock broker, who was exceedingly popular throughout the State.

He was a life-long resident of Franklin county, and was always a Democrat, staunch and true, and an untiring party worker.

Mrs. Collins' father, Hon. A. F. Gowdy, several times represented Taylor and Green counties in the Legislature.

Mr. Gowdy was a prominent Knight Templar. He joined the Frankfort Commandery in 1847, and was one of the first Masters in the State.

Mrs. Collins is the niece of Sister Lucia, of Nazareth, who is the most interesting woman in the Catholic world to-day, being (in point of time) the oldest "sister" in the world, and the first to celebrate her golden jubilee several years ago.

Mrs. Collins is a charming woman, handsome, talented and highly accomplished and has won fame by her poems, stories and musical compositions. A college graduate with the degree of A. B., brilliant and attractive, with a true nobility of character which wins for her the highest respect and admiration of all who know her, and is in every way qualified for the position which she seeks.

The above excerpt from the Louisville Times will give a true idea of the people of this and of the great interest of this world-wide throughout the Four Congressional district where Mrs. Collins' kinsmen, and connections predominate in politics. Of course, every politician, of any note, in the district knows that in supporting Mrs. Collins he is endorsing for himself; for such "bread cast upon the waters (political) will return after many days" in the shape of votes that lead to desired offices; but Mrs. Collins will be supported in this district because she is of "our ain folk," beloved by all who know her; because she is a noble woman, a perfect lady, lovely in mind and character; and because there is no one in the State better fitted for the position which she seeks. We feel sure that the boasted chivalry—as well as the true womanhood of Kentucky will stand by her and help her to win the position so nobly fought for and so courageously won by a woman who, so many years ago, and which has been occupied ever since, by good women than whom there is none more deserving than Mrs. W. Leslie Collins who would make an ideal State Librarian of whom Kentucky may well be proud.—Campbellville Enquirer.

A Real Wonderland.

South Dakota, with its rich silver mines, bonanza farms, wide ranges and strange, natural formations, is a veritable wonderland. At Mount City, in the home of Mrs. E. D. Clapp, a wonderful case of healing has lately occurred. Her son seemed near death with lunge and throat trouble.

"Exhausting coughing spells occurred every five minutes," writes Mrs. Clapp, "when I began giving Dr. King's New Discovery, the great medicine, that saved his life and completely cured him."

For coughs and colds, throat and lung troubles, he and Hayden & Robertson, druggists, No. 316, Trial bottle free.

A Terrific Storm.

Henderson, Ky., June 23.—A terrific storm which partook of the nature of a whirlwind visited the city and adjacent territory about 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Many trees, chimneys and wires were blown down here. The country districts have not been heard from on account of damaged telephone wires.

Two hundred people had a narrow escape on board the Jewel, an excursion steamer, which was blown into the Kentucky shore three miles above this city. Ninety-five per cent of the excursionists jumped from the second deck to the shore, a height of twenty feet.

One colored woman broke her left leg below the knee and a white woman was injured by being caught between the boat and the shore. The boat was blown against the shore with such force that the deck was covered several inches deep with dirt.

The boat was on its up trip to Evansville when the storm came up. Capt. C. G. Perkins and Mate Frank Dechamp together with other members of the crew, succeeded in quieting the panic and after the boat was made fast to the shore the excited passengers who had jumped were induced to get aboard.

The boat after the delay, about an hour and a half, arrived in safety.
